THE SENATE.

Senator Mahone Votes with the Republicans,

AND STIRS UP THE GENTLEMAN FROM GEORGIA

Pendleton, the Puritan of Politics, Disclaims against Bargains—A Heated and Personal Debate.

SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN

WASHINGTON, March 14

In the senate to day Pendleton called up his resolution respecting reorganization of the senate committees

Allison moved executive session

The democrats opposed and the republicans favored it. The yeas and nays being called Mahone voted with the republicans which created a profound sensation followed by applause in the galleries as it was regarded as conclusive of his intention to vote with the republicans throughout

Pendleton made a speech, saying that he knew nothing as to alleged bargains but omnipresent and omniscient members of the press had whispered that there has been mysterious and extraordinary visits to the other end of the capitol (White House) and had connected the name of a distinguished senator with the dispensation of patronage and organization that there had been a conference at the capitol in which champaigne and satisfaction had been about equally present. As to the organization of the senate did not know what was the foundation of this rumor which had filled the air. The imputation on democratic members was unfounded

Allison's motion to go into executive session was rejected—37 to 35

Hill believed that when all the seats were filled the democrats would still have a majority since Mahone would vote with them

Conkling stoutly denied this

A resolution was here introduced and laid over offering condolence to the Russian government and people

Pendleton affirmed that the democrats had nothing to gain by organization except power to proceed with confirmation of a republican president's appointments. It was a dangerous precedent. The republicans proposed to pair two elected members here present with two men yet to be, and who may never be elected. It was no unlike haste they were exercising in trying to organize

Conkling said that Pendleton was fleeing when no man pursued. He had either thought it necessary to defend the party or create some impression on the country. He referred to the democratic caucus as an ecumenical council, which at last wearied of the question of how the independent party of the senate was to be captured, had become weary of arranging machinery which was to force the gentleman from Illinois (Davis) to walk by the wheel of the democrat's chariot. After it had exhausted the resources of statesmanship it came in with a report which was defective in some regards. For instance it had put both senators from Ohio on the judiciary committee in order that the great state might not only be land of the law but law of the land. It seemed to him that nothing could be more unwarrantable more lacking in utility or more scant of propriety than for the republicans to consent to the organization of the senate against a constitutional majority of the senate to the end that that organization might be overturned Wednesday or Thursday next. It seemed to him that such a proceeding would be beneath the dignity of the senate. He might say in reply to the gentleman from Ohio that the suggestions as to withholding votes had not originated on the republican side but had come from a democratic senator who was able to vindicate himself

After an exciting colloquy among Conkling, Hill and Logan, Hill said that this was the first time in the history that a democrat had shown his democracy by going over to the republicans. He referred to the proud history of Virginia and to her great names—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Henry and Lee—none of whom ever accepted a commission from one party and came here to represent another

Mahone asked if Hill asserted that he did that and Hill evading the question Mahone persistently declared that if Hill intended to make that statement of him it was unwarranted and untrue

Hill (composedly) was not the gentleman acting with the democratic party, and was he not elected to this body as a democrat (with fierce tone). Answer that

Mahone (quietly)—Sir, I was elected as a readjuster. Do you know what readjusters are? (Applause and laughter on the republican side.)

Hill—I understand that there are in Virginia readjusting democrats and debt paying democrats but I understand that they are both democrats. We have nothing to do here with that issue. The question of the Virginia debt is not to be settled in this chamber. [illegible] the senator [illegible] constitutional body as a member of the [illegible] democratic party?

Mahone—Now are [illegible] answered now

Hill—Then I conclude that the senator spoke truly when he said that he did not know what he [illegible] (With [illegible]) What is he? [Laughter.] Everybody has understood that he voted with the democrats. Did he not support Hancock for the presidency and did he not in the presidential election proclaim himself a democrat?

A democratic senator—Make him answer. Up to this hour it was not known on this side of the chamber or in the country how the gentleman would vote. The senator from New York (Conkling) conceded to have information on this somebody who had been elected as a democrat would vote with the republicans and I wanted to find out who that was. It seems that I have uncovered him. Laughter and applause on the democratic side.]

After more argument in the same style Hill congratulated himself in having succeeded where the press of the country had failed and disclosed Mahone's intentions and again in the kindest spirit appealed to Mahone to be true to the democracy of Virginia

Logan drew a parallel between Hill's flattering treatment of the senator from Illinois (Davis) and his severe handling of the senator from Virginia and said that the difference was attributable to the fact that the former who never was a democrat and was not to-day and who was elected from a republican state was voting with the democrats while the latter was not. He defended the right of a man to change his political opinion. Hill himself was once a whig

Hill being interrogated sharply by Logan said that he reserved the right to criticise the public acts of senators without dictating to them their course. He would rather lose control of the senate forever than see the soil of Virginia dishonored. He did not say Mahone would do it but he saw a precipice yawning before him if he voted as the republicans wanted him. God help him for he is gone and he knew that the republicans in their hearts felt the same. They despised treachery and honored him (Hill) for trying to save Mahone from the charge of treachery. He commented on Pendleton's assertion that champagne and satisfaction had hunted in couples at certain dinners, as being extraordinary and he hoped that it would be modified. He also hoped that the democrats would withhold two votes and let organization proceed or else go into executive session. Hill emphatically declared that when every seat was filled the senate would be democratic as now, otherwise he had been deceived. Thirty-eight senators were sent here to sit as democrats. That is one half the senate. One member (Davis) was sent not as a democrat but by democratic votes and he had announced in lofty and patriotic words that he would be true to the trust which sent him. If as Conkling stated the republicans would have a majority how had it been accomplished? Not by states or legislatures. He asserted again that the democrats had 38 votes and Conkling wouldn't deny it

Conkling however did pointedly deny it

Hill didn't blame a man for changing his opinion but it was his duty to inform his associates of such change and no democrat had done that. He asked upon whom Conkling relied on for votes

Conkling rose as if to reply, but merely went to the desk of the vice president and Hill continued excitedly. He asserted that no man in this body would be guilty of treachery to his constituency. He denied reports that Harris and Brown would vote with the republicans as absurd and denied the right of the vice president to participate in organizing the senate. Whose was that one vote which the republicans relied on? Who was ambitious to do what no one had ever done, stand up in this high place and proclaim that he disgraces the commission he holds? Who can it be? Did the republicans receive him with affection and respect? Is he worthy of association? Is he worthy to be a democrat or a republican? He reverted to the question of federal patronage being used to buy votes and keep the republican party in control and approved the president's message on the subject of tenure in office. He then returned forcibly to questioning republicans as to their new recruit and denouncing him personally as a traitor

Harris regretted that Hill had dignified newspaper twaddle respecting himself by noticing a rumor and denied the story in a positive way

Mahone, who occupied a seat on the republican side advanced to the edge of the area fronting the clerk's desk, and proceeded to reply to Hill. That gentleman he said had manifestly engaged in an effort to disclose his (Mahone's) position on the floor

Hill—I do not know your position. How could I disclose it?

Mahone—The gentleman has assumed not only to be the custodian here of the democratic party of the nation but has tried to assert the right to speak for the constituency which I have the privilege in part of representing here. He has done so without their assent (addressing himself directly to Hill and advancing towards him), I owe you sir and I owe those for whom you undertake to speak here, nothing (marks of encouragement on the republican side and in the galleries). I came here as a Virginian, not to represent the democracy for which you (Hill) stand. I came here with as proud a claim to represent that people as you to represent the people of Georgia, won on fields where I have fought with you and others in the cause of my people and of that section of the late unhappy contest. That contest, thank God is over and as one of those engaged in it, and who has not here or elsewhere to make apology for the part he has taken in it, I say, I am not here as a partisan, nor am I here to represent that democracy which has done so much injury to my section of the country. The gentleman undertook to say what constitutes a democrat. I hold that I am infinitely a better democrat than he. [Laughter.] He who stands manfully committed to a full and fair vote and an honest ballot shall see that they can be had in the state of Virginia where those ballots are fashionable. (Applause.) I serve notice on that gentleman that I [illegible] both custodian of my own destiny. I do not intend to be run by that gentleman's caucus. I am here every sense a free man here and trust to be able to protect my own rights and [illegible] those of the people whom I represent. Certainly I take care of my own. I do not intend (turning to Hill directly) that you shall undertake to criticise my conduct by innuendo. I want the senator from Georgia to understand just here that the way to deal with me is to deal directly. What notions of discovery to find out how I am going to vote? (Applause on the floor and in the gallery which was reprimanded by the vice president.) I regret that so early after my appearance here I should have found it necessary to make any remarks on this body. I would prefer to be a little modest. I would prefer to listen and to learn but I could not feel content after what has passed to day to sit silent. The gentleman (Hill) by all manner of insinuations direct and indirect has sought to discover what the [illegible] is that may choose to exercise his right to cast his vote as he pleases and that differ with the gentleman's caucus. He seems to have forgotten that I refused to take part in the party which has not only waged war upon me but upon those whom I represent that has presumed to teach the people of Virginia honesty and true democracy. You sir (addressing Hill) you were duly notified I took no part nor lot in your political machinery and I was supremely indifferent to what you did. (Laughter on the republican side.) You were notified that I should stand on this floor representing in part the state of Virginia. Certainly the legislature which elected me did not require me to state that I was either democrat or anything else. I suppose that the gentleman (Hill) could not have come here from Georgia unless he said that he was a democrat. Any how (applause and laughter) I came here without being required to state to my people what I am. They were all willing to trust me. I was elected by the people not by the legislature for I was an issue in the canvass and no man was elected to the legislature by the party with which I am identified who was not instructed to vote for me for the senate. The gentleman has been chasing all around this chamber to see if he cannot find a partner somewhere. He has been looking around occasionally referring to another senator to know exactly who that senator was who had the manliness and boldness to assert his opinion in this chamber free from the dictation of a democratic caucus. I want that gentleman to know that henceforth and forever here is a man who dares stand here and defend his rights against you and your caucus. (Loud applause and much laughter provoked by violent gesticulations of Mahone.)

Hill who again took the floor hoped that no one imagined that he intended making any personal reply to the remarkable exhibition that a senate had just witnessed. He had only asked who was the democrat that expected to vote with the republicans. To his astonishment the senator from Virginia said that he was the man. Would the senator (Mahone) say that he was not elected as a democrat? He said that he was not required to state that he was a democrat and in the next breath he said that he was a better democrat than himself (Hill). [Addressing himself to the republicans.] I commend him to you. Take good care of him. Nurse him well. [Laughter]

Mahone rising—I cannot allow the gentleman to make any such insinuation

Hill—I make no insinuation

Mahone—You do and an unmanly one

Hoar expressed his emphatic indignation at the degrading exhibition which the senator from Georgia had made. It was the first time in the politics of the country where a senator had undertaken in advance of the act to deliver a lecture to his peer and inform him that if he did a certain thing it would be degrading and treacherous. It was none of the business of the senator from Georgia how any other senator should cast his vote. No slave master or plantation overseer should crack his whip over an American senator. (Applause.) The utterances of the senator from Georgia were an insult to the representatives of the American people. That gentleman had [illegible] chosen as a union man to a state convention and had cast the vote which had carried [illegible] the rebellion and from that day to this he had learned nothing [illegible] consistency or constitutional duty or of propriety or personal behavior. (Applause on the republican side.) The gentleman had undertaken [illegible] between the position of Davis and that of Mahone with much honied commendation of the former. The senator from Illinois had been elected by the legislature of a state which had given a republican majority of from 40,000 to 50,000. [illegible] the majority in that legislature [illegible] He owes his vote [illegible] democratic [illegible] organization of [illegible] was repugnant to his taste and judgment [illegible] Mahone who owes his seat to a state which cast 81,000 republican votes and 31,000 independent democratic readjuster votes as against 96,000 bourbon regular democratic votes will vote as he likes for an organization that commends itself to his taste and judgment. That is the only difference between the two senators and the [illegible] of the senator from Georgia. [Laughter.] There are democrats in the South who mean to vote [illegible] There are democrats in the South who mean to live a nation [illegible] not [illegible] an aggregate of petty provinces any longer. There are democrats in the south who do not mean to live any longer in graveyards and among tombs whose faces [illegible] toward the morning and on whose brow the rising sunlight of future generations of this country is already beginning to be visible. The avant courier of this column has already reached the senate chamber after long waiting and yearning. The republicans of the north desire to stretch forth a friendly hand but the desire is inspired by no miserable ambition for office, for political victory but by a spirit of patriotism which loves the south fully as much as it loves the north. It is the spirit of a united not a divided country. It is the spirit of future and not of past. It is in the spirit of union and not of sectionalism. We are holding out our hand to the brave and noble democrats of Virginia and whose representative took his seat to day on this floor

Comment on the Day's Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, March 14—The expectation that the contest over the organization of the senate would be uncommonly interesting to-day filled the galleries at an early hour and the floor was also crowded throughout the afternoon by members of the house of representatives giving the chamber the appearance of a regular "wild day" which the exciting character of the proceedings fully justified. The chief sensations of the day were, of course the fierce attack of Hill upon Mahone and the latter's vigorously defiant reply. It was the general comment that Hill's speech materially strengthened the solidity of any compact that may have been made between Mahone and the republicans as the Georgia senator's threats could not possibly have any other effect with a courageous man like Mahone than to impel him to nail his colors to the mast. The scene was very striking, as Mahone, slight in figure, but bearded like a pard paced up and down the area in front of the clerk's desk and hurled his scornful retorts at the large framed Georgian, and the galleries broke out in applause, and the floor with roars of laughter when he quickly replied to the question as to whether he was not elected to the senate as a democrat by saying that he came hither as a readjuster—a description which his present attitude in the readjustment of the senate organization and of political power in general was at once perceived to be notably felicitous. On the whole the little Virginia senator, despite a comical suggestion of the gamecock in his manner and appearance, made a decidedly strong impression upon his auditors to day and was conceded on all hands to have justified in his impromptu debut his local reputation as a fine speaker and a man of power

Archbishop McCabe's Letter to the Land League

DUBLIN, March 14—Following is the text of that part of Archbishop McCabe's lenten pastoral to members of the land league

Let nobody accuse us of want of sympathy with the great question of justice which now appeals to parliament for settlement. The cause is just and holy and carries with it the blessings of religion. Amongst the terrible mistakes made formerly for rulers of this unhappy land there is none perhaps which will exceed in folly that which will be now committed if the vital question of tenure of land holdings is not settled now and forever on just principles to all. So convinced are we that a full and honest settlement of this angry controversy is essential to the temporal happiness and moral and religious interests of our own countrymen that if the sacrifice of our blood could lead to the consummation of this grand act of justice we would make that sacrifice. While we bless the end now aimed at, we must again proclaim that some of the means employed in the struggle cannot receive the sanction of religion. The modesty of her daughters was the ancient glory of Ireland but all this is now to be abandoned and our daughters are summoned under the flimsy pretext of charity to take their stand in the noisy arena of public life. The pretext of charity is merely assumed for already we have holy associations of men and women who do works of mercy for the poor and afflicted and even the harsh laws now coming in force have more fully provided for the families of those falling under their power

ALEXANDER III.

Assumes the Throne—His Manifesto to his Subjects.

ST PETERSBURG, March 14—The following imperial manifesto has been promulgated

We by the grace of God, Alexander III emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, czar of Poland, grand duke of Finland, etc, hereby make known to all our faithful subjects that it has pleased Almighty God in His inscrutable will to visit Russia with a heavy blow of fate and to call her benefactor, Emperor Alexander II, to Himself. He fell by the hands of impious murderers, who had repeatedly sought his precious life and made their attempts because they saw in him the protector of Russia the foundation of her greatness and the promoter of the welfare of the Russian people

Let us bow to the unfathomed will of divine providence and offer up to the Almighty our prayers for the repose of the pure soul of our beloved father. We ascend the throne which we inherit from our forefathers the throne of the Russian empire and czardom and grand dukedom inseparably connected with it. We assume the heavy burden which God has imposed upon us with a firm reliance upon his Almighty help. May he bless our work to the welfare of our beloved fatherland and may he guide our strength for the happiness of all faithful subjects. In repeating before Almighty God the sacred vow made by our father, to devote according to the testament of our forefathers the whole of our lives to care for the welfare and honor of Russia we call upon our faithful subjects to unite before the altar of the Almighty their prayers with ours, and command them to swear fidelity to us and to our successor his Imperial highness, the Hereditary Grand Duke Nicolai ALEXANDROVITCH

Given at St Petersburg Anno Domini 1881, and the first year of our reign

TUESDAY MORNING MARCH 15 1881

ENGLAND AND IRELAND

It would appear that the effort of the land league in Ireland were beginning to subside and it would be strange if it were not so since endeavors of this nature must in time and of necessity spend their active force When a revolution is attempted it must make progress, or soon subside Men if they cannot act at such times are unable to keep up the excitement necessary to continued attempts The land league has not proposed to itself any distinct or direct assault on British power knowing how hopeless such effort would be and it seems to have gone about as far as it can unless it should resolve to employ more violent methods But in fact it is held down by a power which it knows it dares not openly dispute The Irish expected much help from the liberal party now in control of the British government But the hope has been disappointed Indeed it could not be otherwise No party in England would dare to yield to the demands of Irish justice It is singular indeed that even the representative organs of the liberal party are unable to see that the Irish have anything to complain of The London Spectator says that the English mind is totally unable to account for the rooted antipathy of the Irish to the English government and the English character It calls this fact the puzzle of history The Irish are irreconcilable and no theory explains the cause And the Edinburg Review discussing England and Ireland in a long article fails likewise to evince the slightest conception of the fact that the Irish have any just [illegible] of complaint or any grievance whatever It does not occur to these organs of British opinion that the Irish have been despoiled by conquest and confiscation that their land has been taken from them and themselves reduced to practical slavery that for four or five centuries Ireland has been the theatre of English oppression pillage spoliation and cruelty as dreadful as anything in all history and that non resident land-holders, whose titles are all founded in these long-continued acts of outrage and injustice now gather the products of the soil and wring from the labor of the country the last possible penny to support luxurious living in England and elsewhere abroad, leaving the tenants only the most bare and miserable subsistence after meeting the forced tribute payment During the last forty years the population of Ireland has been diminished one half owing largely to the increased exactions of the land holders who leave almost nothing to support life Yet even the foremost liberal organs are strangely unable to see why the Irish do not love the English government which maintains upholds and enforces this system of remorseless plunder based on wholesale confiscation John Bull is a great philanthropist but at all times and in all places he has been sadly oblivious to the consequences of his own cruelties and oppressions

BARGAINS IN POLITICS

Mr Pendleton is unnecessarily distressed about a bargain between the republicans and Mr Mahone for organization of the senate True a thing of this kind doesn't wear a clear look and is open to criticism but Mr Pendleton who is an old politician is not so entirely ignorant of the ways of political intrigue as to be unaware that in politics every available bargain is always accepted the only question being whether the bargain promises profit to the contracting parties and injury to their opponent When a scheme will bear these tests we are not to expect its movers to look much further They are not the men to use up time in refining upon its possible moral aspects If Mr Pendleton and his party associates in the senate will look into the object they may see something in their own plan for organizing the senate quite as indefensible as this reported bargain with Mahone All the democratic senators met in caucus the other day to consider the formation of committees and distribute the patronage of the senate After long consultation protracted through two or three sittings they completed a bargain for disposal of the whole Mr Pendleton participated claimed his share and had it assigned to him It is now complained that the fruition of this bargain is to be defeated by the consummation of another bargain This would be sad indeed Bargains are unprecedented in our politics No one ever heard of such things before Mr Pendleton in his innocence finds it hard to regard so scandalous and odious a thing as a "bargain" within the limits of political possibility He had always thought better of human nature than to imagine that his political opponents would enter into a bargain to spoil the fruits of a bargain entered into by himself and his party friends We should have politics on an ideal basis very shortly if our politicians of all classes would only practise for themselves the high morality which they require in the conduct of their political opponents

Blackwood says of George Eliot's mode of [illegible]position She was the most careful and comp[illegible] among authors Her beautifully accurate manuscript free from blur or erasure written a[illegible]ery letter delicately and distinctly and with e[illegible] only the outward and visible finished wa[illegible]ard labor which she had taken sign of the im[illegible] ideas She never drew any of to work out her [illegible]essions from second hand her facts or in [illegible] the number and variety and thus in spite [illegible] she had rarely much to of her illustrations correct in her proof [illegible]ets

The national banks which sent in greenbacks to the treasury and demanded surrender of their bonds now wish they hadn't been so hasty Their object was undoubtedly to produce a sudden stringency in the money market in retaliation for the passage of the funding bill The amount of circulation thus surrendered was about $16 000 000 But the funding bill did not become a law and the banks are not allowed to countermand their hasty action. Trying to take snap judgment they got caught in their own trap

The information given in dispatches of to day in relation to control of the Northern Pacific by the Oregon company is more full than anything hitherto presented It confirms all essential particulars hitherto reported. Private telegrams and letters received here are to the same purport The public now have all the leading facts This great stroke will be productive of vast consequences to the entire northwest not the least of which will inure to Portland as the focus of this mighty railway system

The Detroit bridge and iron works have contracted to build the great Northern Pacific bridge at Bismarck Dakota which will be the most important structure on the line The bridge, a Pratt truss is to cost $700 000 Its 1,000 feet embrace three spans of 400 feet each and it is to be built high above steamboat travel, 70 feet above low water, the piers resting on bed rock 60 feet below the low water mark The bridge will not be finished till the spring of 1882

The Malheur reservation is to be abandoned and the stock and supplies transferred to the Yakima agency as soon as the roads are practicable for travel which is not likely to happen before June Many ranchers in the vicinity of Malheur reservation are waiting with interest to learn what disposition is to be made of the lands

The Rev Dr Cuyler in recent reminiscences as to Carlyle mentioned that he heard him say "I'd like to see America Ye may talk about your democracy or any other cracy or any kind of polectical rubbish but the secret of happiness in America is that ye have a vast deal of land for a very few people"

It appears that the Villard syndicate is not now buying Northern Pacific stock though blocks of it are known to be still on the market This is one of the many proofs that the syndicate has gained its object It doesn't want more of the stock at present though it could command the money to buy

Chicago always boasting of enterprise now declares through her papers that she is ready to take the world's fair off the hands of New York and carry it through to complete success New York is spoken of as a rather slow and sleepy town of which not much is to be expected

John D Merryman who has been deputy collector of customs at Astoria for several years has been nominated for the collectorship The selection is a good one

THE WATKINDS CASE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

When THE OREGONIAN speaks slightingly of W H Watkinds offense ten years ago it seems to forget that he laid in ambush to attack an unarmed man who was not a ruffian but [illegible] cient [illegible] vocation and whose physical frailty was supposed to make him an easy victim But the thing [illegible] with the [illegible] resistance [illegible] drew a [illegible] stance [illegible] involving two shots in the street and when the assailant stepped into a store [illegible] cool [illegible] followed to the door and putting his gun muzzle in the crack between the door and jamb within four feet of the man shot him in the back and would have instantly killed him only that the ball grazed some substance that deadened the blow but not so but that the bullet cut through the clothing inflicting a wound that left his victim half paralyzed for years and a sufferer from spinal injury for life It was a matter of notoriety at the time that the party in power conspired to corrupt the courts and so prevent justice to the assailant

Witnesses for the state were not summoned before it and the grand jury were compelled to bring in an indictment by which they were assured that the prisoner could be sent to state prison for ten years but under which he could simply be fined as was the case If you had happened to be the victim of such an outrage you might have lost some faith in our boasted free institutions that made such a mockery of justice possible

The remarks of Judge Deady cover the moral aspect of the case conclusively Perhaps you do not know that this man's vote has been challenged for this same cause so that he has had due notice of his vote being illegal The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceeding small and if after all these years retribution shall come to this man who has so successfully escaped and come too at the hands of the same party (or members of it) that once conspired to prevent justice in his behalf it looks as if the logic of events came to the rescue of outraged law and simply illustrate the beauty of the old proverb better late than never

SEA TRIP.—Yesterday afternoon the new launch Argonaut, built by Messrs J W & V Cook [illegible] between their cannery at Clifton and the new fishing station to be established at Sand island [illegible] steamed down the river on her trial trip. A few friends and press representatives were invited for the trip which was in every way enjoyable. The craft is staunch and shapely and she is built for speed. Her machinery built by the Willamette Iron Works is a model of strength and worked very smoothly. The boat stopped at St John's and the party was shown through the Oregon Barrel Factory by the manager Mr L O Severance and the superintendent Mr A F Learned. The Argonaut [illegible] 150 revolutions per minute making a trifle over [illegible] miles an hour. Capt Fred Cangdon will handle her wheel and Mr Herbert [illegible] her throttle.

BOLD THEFT.—Last Friday, in broad daylight, a party of men with wagon and spades deliberately went into the vineyard of Mr [illegible] Brendle at [illegible] and [illegible] carried them [illegible]. The neighbors saw the men at work, but supposed from the publicity of the affair that they were authorized [illegible] Mr Brendle. They were seen to go in [illegible] Holladay's Addition but [illegible] Mr Brendle offers a reward [illegible].

HOME SOCIAL.—The Congregational ladies give one of their pleasant socials to-night. The literary and musical exercises begin promptly at 8 o'clock which please make a note of. A good deal of curiosity is felt to hear the new elocutionist who has kindly consented to make her initial bow to a Portland audience to-night. Mrs Cruzan, Miss Rosa Carson and other favorite vocalists sing. After the entertainment there will be merry making, sociability and refreshments served. It will be a good place to spend the evening.

THE FLEETWOOD.—This is the name of a very handsome steam launch which is being built by Captain U B Scott a short distance above Smith's sawmill in the upper portion of the city. The hull is all completed and will be ready to be launched as soon as the seams can be calked and painted. The Fleetwood has been modeled by Captain Scott, the owner. She is of very handsome design and promises to be when finished, the fastest craft of the kind on these waters.

INCORPORATED.—The Sheridan Water and Manufacturing Company of Sheridan, Yamhill county has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state. Their object is to take water from the south fork of the Yamhill river by canal to the town of Sheridan for the use of said company and the town generally. Capital stock [illegible]. Incorporators Daniel Roundtbush, Edward Money and Jas L Bewley.

STABBED.—Saturday evening says the Telegram a machinist named Harkins met with very rough usage at the hands of a man whom he said was a boiler maker. They had both been drinking, and some way became involved in a quarrel when Harkins received a severe stab in the right side of the neck and had his right ear partially severed from his head. No arrests were made up to a late hour.

TAKEN OVER THE [illegible].—The little launch Gold Dust which is to ply on the Columbia above the [illegible] is now being taken over the portage. Last Friday the work was commenced. The Gold Dust has been cut in two and [illegible] transferred [illegible]. Upon arrival at the upper Cascades she will be lengthened by having a central section about twenty feet added to her.

WOOLEN MILLS FIRE.

THE OREGON CITY FACTORY CONSIDERABLY DAMAGED

Loss about $16,000—Covered by Insurance—The Company's Pumps Save the Mill from Complete Destruction.

Yesterday afternoon about half past three fire broke out in the finishing room of the Oregon City Woolen Mills at Oregon City. The building was soon filled with dense smoke which poured forth in great volumes from every window and it was low at first seemed as though the mill was doomed. The smoke was so thick in the finishing room in which the wheel that drives the special fire pumps was located that the belt could not be promptly adjusted. Water from the city pipes was turned on near this wheel and after some delay the mill pumps were started. There was a breeze from the south and flames spread to the basement under the main building. In about thirty minutes the entire basement and first floor were flooded and the fire placed under control. An hour later the fire was extinguished.

It was impossible last night for the superintendent to give an estimate of the damage. All work in the [illegible] is ruined, several large pieces of machinery [illegible] the largest set of shears [illegible] useless and much wool is burned. Messrs Jacobs Bros [illegible] this estimate from information at hand that the loss will not be less than $16,000 and may reach $20,000. They will go to Oregon City this morning and will then be able to determine with more accuracy the amount of damage. The [illegible] will suffer no direct loss.

Work will necessarily be suspended for at least three weeks and this being one of the busiest seasons for the factory, consequential damage [illegible] being able to fill urgent orders will be quite heavy. Except for the loss of the large shears, they would be able to proceed in a crippled sort of a way, but without them work must stop. The shears will be ordered by telegraph this morning from New York to be forwarded by express.

The fire caught in the drying room, an apartment about 30 feet square [illegible] above steam pipes and [illegible] revolving fan which serves to dry [illegible] wool [illegible] immediately.

Messrs Jacobs Bros [illegible] heavy insurance but [illegible] means for fighting a conflagration [illegible] the large pumps alone saved the mill from total destruction.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Irish citizens of Portland propose to celebrate in a becoming manner the 17th of March. The day so dear to every patriotic Irish heart, will be commemorated by parade, musical and literary exercises and conclude with a grand ball. At 11 o'clock the procession will form on First street right resting on Stark in following order: Grand marshal and aides, Portland Hibernian Benevolent Society, Ancient Order of Hibernians, invited guests, other organizations. After forming the procession will march through the principal streets of the city to St Mary's academy where the usual musical exercises will be held by the pupils. Reforming, the procession will march down Fourth street to Turn Halle where the oration will be delivered and the other literary exercises observed. At the conclusion of these, the procession will reform and marching to their respective halls disband.

The following are the officers of the day: Grand marshal Michael Gleason, president of the day M J Gleason, orator R C White.

In the evening a grand ball will be given at Turn Halle under the auspices of the Portland Hibernian Benevolent Society. This will be the twenty first anniversary ball given by this old and highly esteemed organization. In no respect will it be inferior to the social affairs of the past. The society is omitting no expense nor effort to make the event successful and enjoyable.

DISTRICT TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Owing to pressure on our columns we are unable to present a full report of the closing proceedings of the district teachers' institute held at Eugene City last week. We give place, however, to the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the thanks of this institute are hereby tendered as follows: To Prof Condon and also to Rev S H Hubbard for their highly instructive and interesting addresses.

2 To the O & C R R Co for half fare tickets to delegates.

3 To the Methodist church and also to the trustees of this school district for the use of their respective halls.

4 To the public at large for their attendance and liberality in defraying the expenses of printing, and rent of church for evening sessions, and also for their hospitality extended to the delegates.

To those who have contributed music, essays, declamations and recitations in the entertainment of the institute.

[illegible] Prof Powell for the [illegible] scholarly and skillful manner in which he has conducted this institute and that we regard with fraternal pride Prof Powell's devotion to the [illegible] in the state of Oregon. We regard him [illegible] the right man in the right place.

To the county superintendent for his [illegible] efforts to render the institute a success [illegible].

[illegible] in which they have [illegible].

Resolved, That female teachers should [illegible] and receive [illegible] wages as male teachers [illegible] like circumstances.

Resolved, That no person who habitually uses profane language, or intoxicating drinks should be granted a certificate of good moral character.

Resolved, That we as a body condemn the use of tobacco as unfit for the teacher's office.

Resolved, That this body regards teachers' institutes properly conducted as highly instructive to teachers and hence profitable to the public; that the legislature is in duty bound to provide funds for defraying the expenses of the same.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this institute that the public sentiment of Oregon demands of our next legislature the passage of a five mill tax on all taxable property in Oregon for the support of public schools.

Resolved, That we thank Prof Powell and also those Lane county members of our last legislature who worked so faithfully for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in this resolution.

Resolved, That the press which has aided to make this institute a success by publishing notices of the same, and publishing our proceedings thus paving the way for yet more successful institutes in the future merits the support and gratitude of every member of this institute. NOTES FROM COOS COUNTY

[illegible] March [illegible] 1881

[illegible] has been [illegible] running.

Grass is growing nicely on the hillsides and from the river and stock is looking well. Some of our prominent stock men have cattle now ready for market. They are very fat though they have had no feed except what they got on the range.

Our town boasts of a brass band and it is said to be the best in the state. It is composed of men who came from the city of Baltimore and they nearly all belonged to musical associations in that place. The band gave a grand ball on the 2d of last month which was a pleasing affair.

The rainy season seems to be about past and farmers are commencing to plow for spring crops. The fencing swept away by the late flood has nearly all been replaced, which shows that our thrifty grangers are not easily discouraged. New fencing has taken the place of the old rickety palings that were washed away and adds a new feature to Coquille farms.

Our roads are in a very bad condition and we expect they will be in a bad condition at this time of the year, until the people of Oregon shall elect a legislature that can take a common sense view of our road laws and enact an entire new system by which our roads can be improved. A road law that would be suitable for one county does not do well in another and as Coos county has but ten wagon roads and those few in one part of the county it is difficult to apply the labor when needed. For instance this road district has one wagon road. Some of the voters who are liable for a tax live ten miles from that road. Now when this road needs repairing it seems unjust to warn those who live so far off to come forward and help to repair the wagon road when likely they will be obliged to jump logs and crawl through brush in order to reach the place to work out their road tax. I would also suggest that the people elect lawyers for county judges hereafter, or persons at least who have knowledge enough of law to be able to tell when a road petition is properly presented [illegible]. Many thousand dollars' labor and money have been expended in this county on roads [illegible].

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS

Two communications from J B Montgomery dated New York Feb 11th and 23d—were read and placed on file. These letters were in reference to the proposed improvement of the lower Columbia and Willamette rivers and the appropriations to be made by congress.

FROM SENATOR SLATER

U S SENATE CHAMBER,
WASHINGTON, Feb [illegible] 1881.

Hon John McCraken, Sir: Your telegram of the 24th inst received this morning. I send you a report of New York board of engineers upon Gillespie's proposed plan of improving the mouth of the Columbia river which is adverse thereto and necessarily defeats any appropriation [illegible] purpose. I have moved to increase the appropriation for the lower Willamette and Columbia from Portland to the sea, including the [illegible] at the mouth of the river from $47,000 as fixed by the house to $70,000 and have urged the committee [illegible] to grant the same. But I understand that [illegible] so large an amount appropriated [illegible] the committee refuse to raise an appropriation. I intend to make an effort in the senate when the bill comes up [illegible]. Yours truly, JAMES H SLATER

The communication was ordered placed on file.

[illegible]

The following communication from Capt [illegible] was read and filed:

SIGNAL SERVICE U S A,
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb 11 1881.

[illegible] under the control of the [illegible] signal service [illegible] and that other [illegible] head [illegible] at Washington [illegible] reliable data alike beneficial to the merchant, farmer and seaman. I showed that [illegible] intelligently a system of signal stations should be established as follows:

A wire from Cape Flattery to Port Townsend [illegible] a wire from Cape Blanco lat 42 deg 50 min long 124 deg 30 min to Roseburg lat 43 deg 10 min long 123 deg 18 min. These two last named stations are 56½ nautical miles apart and Roseburg bears true north 73 deg 10 min 30 sec east from Cape Blanco. Also wire from Cape Mendocino lat 40 deg 26 min long 124 deg 24 min west to Red Bluff lat 40 deg 10 min long 122 deg 16 min west. These last two points are 98 8-10 nautical miles apart and Red Bluff bears true south 80 deg 41 min east from Mendocino. Again another wire from Point Arena to main wire in interior and again a wire from Point Reyes also to main wire and again a wire from Point Conception to main wire. None of these last three are long wires, as the main telegraph lines are near the same. At San Diego there is already a station. Now here we have a coast line of nearly 800 miles. By [illegible] the stations I above established and a sub center at any point they please to designate who can say that it would not be a great aid to commerce and agriculture? These stations making tri-daily reports to a center on this coast after a short time to enable the officers to gain a little experience would give unmistakable indications. Take Cape Flattery in communication with Port Townsend for instance, besides warning the lumber or coal laden vessels that a gale was blowing outside, it would also acquaint the consignee in the Sound that his vessel was off that point and [illegible] sending [illegible] and still the station need never be [illegible] less than a [illegible] the signal service. Suppose a wire had been established at Cape Flattery at the time of the Rival of the [illegible] and Orpheus [illegible] valuable lives might have been saved [illegible] assistance [illegible]

[illegible]

Yours very respectfully, [illegible] LACHLAN

We were in a drug store the other day and a customer asked for a bottle of Ammen's Cough Syrup saying I do not know anything about it myself but my neighbor advised me to buy it for [illegible] and tells me that the use of three bottles has entirely cured him of a cough of two years standing. VILLARD'S OPERATIONS.

Motives for the Deal and How It Was Accomplished.

THE BILLINGS MANAGEMENT TO BE RETIRED IN SEPTEMBER

Complete History of the Transaction—Robert Harris Will Probably be the New President.

SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.

NEW YORK, March 14.—It was so late last night when I was acquainted with the rumors concerning the change in the control of the Northern Pacific Railway company that I was not able to interview the parties directly concerned in the new deal and thus verify the statements made in my dispatch. The officers of the Northern Pacific [illegible] directors were here a few days ago and the representatives of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company had all [illegible] to keep their counsel, giving [illegible] but to those who had within the past three days directly questioned the subject requiring most positive denials of the rumors. Mr Henry Villard himself stated that he was not buying Pacific stock. All the circumstances however pointed to the fact that a grand and momentous deal had been made and on the strength of all these, I last night telegraphed you. To-day was the first [illegible] in the country [illegible] important transaction that the control of the Northern Pacific had passed into the hands of a powerful syndicate who [illegible] their interests [illegible]. Examining further I [illegible] more fully into the matter [illegible] to-day [illegible] conversations with parties [illegible]

[illegible] Henry Villard president of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company [illegible]

[illegible] began to agitate the question of constructing a competition line on the north side of the river from and to the same points the Railway & Navigation company managers began to kick, to use a vulgar saying. The more they kicked the warmer became the fight and the more determined were the Northern Pacific to put the line through, for they felt that if such strenuous opposition should come from a company already owning and operating a line of road between the points named it certainly must be a remarkably remunerative investment. Finally the railway and navigation company seeing that they could win their point no other way proposed a compromise, but this was scorned, Mr Billings and the directory of the Northern Pacific informing Mr Villard that they proposed to build the line. With commendable enterprise Mr Villard conceived a new plan for gaining the point he wished and defeating the construction of the rival road and this was no less than the purchase of the Northern Pacific control. Such a plan would stagger the ordinary individual, but Villard knew what he was doing and knew the men with whom he was dealing. They were mostly prominent railroad men and before he knew it there were $10,000,000 at his disposal. He said that he would go into the market and get the stock before it could be known what he was up to or the moment the actual object would become bruited on change that moment holders would play with his money and keep the quotations. Accordingly with his $10,000,000 Mr Villard went into Wall street just about a month ago. Northern Pacific was low at that time, being in the neighborhood of [illegible] or 38. By excellent management, quiet maneuvering and tact Villard succeeded in getting $[illegible] worth of Northern Pacific securities instead of $20,000,000 as I stated last night and this was done, strange as it may appear, without materially exciting the stock market. At no time was there an advance of five points [illegible] the average of Villard's payments. On the strength of certain rumors and the knowledge that something was happening, the article has since steadily advanced, until it [illegible] points above when Villard struck it with his $[illegible] club. The stock which was purchased for the Oregon Railway & Navigation company by Mr Villard is to the extent of [illegible] preferred. [illegible]

[illegible] The regular annual meeting of the company will be held in September next and on that occasion it [illegible] that the [illegible] will take [illegible] the management of [illegible] railway [illegible] President Billings [illegible] holder of $500,000 of securities has been one of the largest stockholders of the road, will then retire from the presidency, his [illegible] being [illegible]. There may be a clash as to his successor but the Villard syndicate anticipates no trouble in holding the management.

Congress in incorporating the Northern Pacific authorized the issue of $100,000,000 of stock, but no small proportion of that amount is locked up in the treasury, having never been put upon the market. Some authorities estimate the amount of stock issued at $[illegible] but the largest amount ever represented and voted upon at any annual meeting was $[illegible]. But even though Mr Billings, as the leader of an opposition to the Villard syndicate could attempt to retain the control of the road, the latter party believes that the effort would prove futile inasmuch as they hold what even if $25,000,000 dollars is not really a controlling interest the smaller holdings will be much more likely to gravitate toward them than to the comparatively small block of $6,000,000 held by Mr Billings. However, no fight of this sort is anticipated. The new syndicate will carry out the proposed improvements projected by Mr Billings with the exception of the competition line along the north shore of the Columbia. The securing of this point was the chief reason for the formation of the Villard syndicate. Already the successor of the presidency of the Northern Pacific road has occupied the attention of the Villard party and they have held some long and earnest discussions on the subject. Many prominent names have been suggested and canvassed but none have met with the favor that has greeted the nomination of Mr Robert Harris formerly president of the Chicago Burlington & Quincy railroad. For the past three years Mr Harris has been prominently identified with the Erie and as every western or eastern railroad man knows, is one of the most accomplished managers in the country. Whether or not Mr Harris becomes president of the Northern Pacific Co rests entirely with himself. He can have the position if he chooses to accept it and there is little question but what he will take the new post of honor when the time arrives, which as I have stated above will be next September.

ENTIRE CHANGE.

Having just completed marking our goods at a

GREAT REDUCTION.

We are now prepared to offer our entire stock, which is complete in all its departments, at

SAN FRANCISCO'S LOWEST PRICES.

Why we have made this grand change is:

1st. We are disposing of our retail business in San Francisco to make Portland our headquarters.
2d. Nearly all the desirable goods have been shipped up here to be sold.
3d. We have better facilities this year than ever before.
4th. We mean to lead the trade in every line if the LOWEST price for the BEST goods will bring it.

REMEMBER,

It is a pleasure, and not trouble, to show goods, when our prices pay to opposition, but defy competition.

IN OUR
GLASSWARE DEPARTMENT

We have really done wonders, having reduced the entire line 50 per cent. This is no humbug, but come and be convinced. We are to-day giving more Glassware for one dollar than any other house in town for two dollars.

Having an extraordinary large stock in the above line we feel justified in saying that we can satisfy the poor and rich, having cheap, medium and the very best Glassware made.

FOR OUR
CROCKERY DEPARTMENT

We can only repeat the above facts.

FRENCH CHINA.

We have just received direct from France, 25 casks of the celebrated L. Haviland & Co. FRENCH CHINA, the very best goods ever imported to this country, which we offer at a great reduction from former quotations.

We have entered into a large contract with the leading BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY East, which enables us to give a better carriage for the money than any other house on the coast, being of our own and direct importation.

OUR CUTLERY

Has been greatly reduced. We carry none but the BEST.

THE WHOLE BIBLE ON WOMAN'S ELEVATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

In your daily issue of February 24 appears an article over the signature of D an Clarke, assailing the position recently taken in Portland by several ministers that the Bible rightly interpreted is the strongest weapon against the enemies of woman suffrage The article is headed "The Bible on Woman's Elevation" An old and venerated adage says "Half a truth is a whole lie" But as Mr Clarke did not write "The Whole Bible" etc I don't know that under modern constructions of law he could be held responsible for more than half the truth "No principle of Blackstone won't ever hazard the construction on the interpretation of a law regardless of the effects and consequences or reason and spirit and the comparison of a law with laws made by the same legislator See Blackstone's Com vol 1 p p 91 Hence Mr Clarke's whole argument rests on the assumption that the texts he cites are incompatible with woman's scriptural equality with man When a comparison with other laws made by the same legislator would have shown him that every text he cited refers to woman as a subject of local laws which were the outgrowths of disorder and confusion and the result of her lost primal condition coupled with covenants promises and covenant oath for her restoration and recovery

As the reason of the law is the life of the law (Coke) all the law is included in the reason And to get a proper understanding of this two things must be kept in mind First the positive statements of her natural equality and second an interruption in the natural order of things out of which grew her relative inferiority as a subject of unjust local laws which the legislator promised to destroy and restore her with all things to the primal state The bible is full of this See Acts iii, 21 Mat xv 13 Isa xi 9

Her natural equality Gen ii 18 A "helpmeet — standing opposite to, or before him neither inferior or superior but in all things like and equal to himself A Clarke D D, L L D on the Hebrew word Gen ii 23 Bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh If she was inferior to Adam Adam was inferior to himself They shall be one flesh Gen ii 24 Can any one be inferior to itself? This text is cited by Christ—Mat xix 3-8 to show the Pharisees that Moses suffered divorce in his civil law to prevent greater evils while his moral law retained the original order till the evils could be corrected This grew out of the Pharisees question on divorce (cited by C) Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement and put her away Now mark the answer Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives but from the beginning it was not so Suffered you Here are the unjust demands of local law long existing and to be suffered. Then he adds, But from the beginning it was not so Here are the eternal demands of Moses moral law based on the natural order of things which he promised should ultimately triumph

If any statesman in this nation was asked Why did not Abraham Lincoln issue the emancipation proclamation long before he did? The only true answer possible is the one returned by Christ For the hardness of your hearts. One year sooner would have sunk this nation

Paul on her natural equality at a single stroke wipes out all distinctions created by local law There is neither Jew nor Greek bond nor free male nor female for ye are all one in Christ Jesus Gal iii 28 Thus we see at the beginning and in the restoration Moses makes them one Christ makes them one and Paul makes them one Whenever one can be inferior to itself the wife can be inferior to the husband Woman under Roman law Justin says Women are precluded from all public affairs they cannot be judges nor execute the functions of magistrates they cannot sue plead nor act in any case as proxies Justin vol 1, p 13 We have only to consider the force of prejudice sustained by local law to see why Paul in some places prohibited women from teaching Both prudence and justice would do the same to-day with a man If the prejudices of a people were so strong against him as to neutralize or render odious his teachings common sense and God would command him to desist But where no such prejudices exist and Paul writes Help those women that labored with me in the gospel Phil iv 3

Consult another law by the same legislator Col iii 22 Servants obey your masters Here are the demands of local law and resistance would engender greater evils and prevent moral reform But he continues Masters give to your servants that which is just and equal Justice according to Roman law would destroy all slavery and equal measures up to our declaration of independence

The first text quoted by Mr Clarke— Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee Gen iii 16—fully sustains my position as it shows a change in her former relation For if he was naturally her inferior it was but a continuation of her natural state And if not naturally his equal how did she become relatively his inferior by the fall

His case of Sarah lying for Abraham on Protestant attempts to excuse and it only exhibits the weakness of human nature under pressure of which Mr C himself is a worthy imitator For in his anxiety to prove woman's Scriptural inferiority to man that Sarah he has told just half the truth (she was Abraham's half sister) keeping back woman's natural equality to man laid down by Moses reiterated by Christ and confirmed by Paul And the two delinquents in the broken column of shattered humanity only confirm the maxim of Wood Elliott We're all poor critters or in the more refined language of Shakespeare Conscience makes cowards of us all Besides this was related of Sarah but never sanctioned and if a man cannot discriminate between history and law he ought to go to school till he can count the notches on the sheepyards before he enters the field of mental conflict

Moreover Mr C mutilates the texts As an example take 1 Tim ii 11 I suffer not a woman to teach but to be in silence leaving the sentence unfinished The two next verses 13 14 would have explained stating her true position as a creature and vindicate her against the charge of inferiority and of bringing death into the world Verse 13 for Adam was first formed then Eve Here he states the order of creation as related by Moses which unquestionably gives superiority to the woman (the last creature of an ascending scale beginning with infusorial life Gen 1 20 and ii 23) Verse 14 Adam was not deceived but the woman being deceived was in the transgression from which her greater guilt and the cause of death have been argued by some but the reverse is certainly true for as he states Adam was first formed &c Adam was placed in the garden and commanded not to eat of the forbidden tree (Gen ii 17) and that was before the woman was made (Gen ii 22) and we are not told whether she received the prohibition from Adam or God or that she received it at all Hence Paul says Adam was not deceived but the woman being deceived was in the transgression that is clearly she was brought in by being deceived but Adam by willful disobedience and in this light all the inspired penman allude to the great transaction Job says "If I covered my transgression as Adam by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom (Job xxxi, 33 and 1 Cor xv 22) For as in Adam all die not in Eve

The Jews are a living monument of the truth of the foregoing statement Moses found them polygamous idolatrous, slave-holding and woman degrading and made his civil law as all legislators must do to regulate them for no civil law can be made and executed that is above the moral status of the people Hence his civil law as Jesus says suffered them He could not do otherwise Civil law meets local wants and in the voyage of human life is ascertained by the quadrant of human necessity day by day

But his moral law is the chronometer of Eden and is as inflexible as God himself and operates with his civil law just as our church does with state by making converts to a moral system and when enough adherents are gained to give a majority on any one point the life of that moral precept must be incorporated into the civil code And this is the history of all laws in the Christian world. How long has it been since our constitution after one hundred years of struggle had to be amended from this very cause? In this way it has freed the Jews from the degrading crimes of idolatry polygamy, man and woman slavery and in these respects elevated them above all the nations of the earth for the reason that they have been under the great instructor two thousand years longer than any other nation And then to say that a system of laws that has accomplished all that is immoral in its tendencies is a very near approach to the focus of human depravity

If it requires wisdom and experience to "interpret" the constitution of the United States made so recently in our own language what must it require to "interpret" the constitution of the moral universe

In all the suffering of the world's Redeemer the record shows no insult or abuse that he ever received at the hands of woman Pilate's wife defended his character plead his cause and warned her husband after he had ascended the judgment seat The chief priests had uttered the dreadful imprecation, "His blood be on us and on our children" One of the disciples had betrayed him, another had denied him, and the rest had forsaken him and fled Yet women in tears followed him to the place of execution, stood by his cross and witnessed his last agonies, was first at the sepulcher with spices to embalm the dead and found the risen Savior to her angels communicated the glad tidings and she first preached them to man and notwithstanding the blindness and depravity of the multitude the strange infatuation of the chief priest and rulers the unfaithfulness of his disciples, yet the reflection of Eden's rays still rested on the brow of the Jewess I D DRIVER
